

To the decision makers in Washington,

The reason I signed the do not call list was simply "I did not want to receive any unsolicited phone calls". I found it ironic that the FCC in the business of protecting my rights of commerce would believe for one moment that allowing these calls is somehow helping me.

Use some common sense please and stop allowing these calls to continue when I've designated that I do not want them. I feel it's an invasion of privacy.

Sincerely
Eric Coursen

This is so ridiculous
